

If what you want is only one owner, then nationalize the whole telecommunications industry. At least then we could get rid of the endless commercials for garbage that pollute the airwaves. If it was not for the internet and shortwave, Americans would not get any information. The best solution would be to limit the number of media outlets owned by the same voice. We must make room for the many voices and try to keep to a dull roar what has been passing for news and entertainment in this country. The airwaves are supposed to belong to the public. If you are not up to protecting the vital interests of all Americans then, you should get out of the way and make room for someone who can.